

Reflection

1. I encountered a lot of challenges with CSS. For example, I was confused about how “float” worked and how to center certain items. I also struggled with images, especially with regards to sizing and masking them. Lastly, I faced challenges when dealing with columns and resizing them. I overcame these challenges by googling and reading through difference sources about how to use certain tags or CSS selectors. I also debugged using the browser and tried different things until it worked or got me closer to the solution.
2. I tried to reflect the brand of the client as a company that provides high quality cinnamons. I accomplished this through many of my design decisions. First, the landing page shows a large picture of very pleasing looking cinnamons and also states “Best Cinnamon in Pittsburgh”. Additionally, I focused on providing large beautiful images that help establish the brand as a high quality bakery. Also, the descriptions of the products in the product detail page, shows how much the client cares about their consumers and providing a high quality service.

I designed a very simple and clean looking website for them because it makes it easy for the users to buy products and navigate the site. Furthermore, I used large images and focused a lot on visuals in order to attract the user’s eyes. I also provided only the relevant information, so that users would not be overwhelmed. Lastly, I used a lot of bright green buttons for important actions such as adding an item to the cart.

Sources

https://www.w3schools.com/howto/howto_css_round_buttons.asp

<https://www.webpagefx.com/blog/web-design/responsive-background-image/>

https://www.w3schools.com/css/css3_buttons.asp